Legacy

by Mr. Hucks

Charles Spurgeon, a London pastor who lived in the 19th century, is known as the "Prince of Preachers" and for good reason. Spurgeon was renowned for his oratory skills and could preach sermons that would captivate his audience. Over the course of his 38 years as a pastor, thousands of people came to hear him preach and when he died, the whole of London mourned his passing. Spurgeon left a great legacy of stalwart faith in Christ and a treasury of writings still read and respected by theologians today.

One of his quotes which I came across the other day, challenged me as both a parent and an educator:

"You are as much serving God in looking after your own children, training them up in God's fear. . . as you would be if you had been called to lead an army to battle for the Lord of Host."

What a challenge for Christians! What an encouragement, also! While directed at parents, this quote applies just as well to Christian educators. Training Christian young people is serious business. We are working with parents to equip their children to be soldiers for Christ. Thank you, SJCS families, for trusting us with this awesome responsibility. Who knows? Maybe the world's next Spurgeon will be one of your children. Thank you for helping us continue our legacy of offering a quality Christian education for almost 60 years.
